Educating Children about Eating Healthy OrganWise Guys Giveaway

July 15, 2010 By Momstart 98 Comments

Tools to teach children make learning so much easier. Or at least I know that I've always been a visual learner. Visual aids, examples, that's my way of learning and I know that everyone is different. Some people can just hear something and then it's with them for life. I'm not that lucky. I have found that teaching my kids has been very easy so far, but explaining to them about organs inside their bodies, that they can't see has been very difficult.

OrganWise Guys sent us two organs. They sent us Hardy Heart and The Kidney Brothers along with quite a selection of coloring books and two DVD's to teach my kids about eating healthy. Zoe's learning!

Miles has been taking Hardy Heart to bed, until he got Buzz Lightyear, but that's another story for sure.

Teaching children about eating healthy foods and getting plenty of exercise should start quite early. Summertime is the perfect opportunity to get your kids outdoors and reinforce the healthy habits we all want to instill in our children. The OrganWise Guys make learning about nutrition and physical activity FUN and memorable for children ages 3-12!

The Smart From the Inside Out Activity book and Smart From the Inside Out reading book has been getting Zoe asking questions. She wants to know what all of the different organs are. And what they do. So it's been a lot of fun showing her what the heart looks like and that it is in side her beating and helping all of her other organs. These questions lead to taking care of them. She says,

“I need to exercise mommy”

And that makes me smile!
